1st verse

A few understood the native people here,
 Embraced their way of life without fear.
 Lived off the land took only what they need,
 Struggled for harmony but never felt defeat,
 And then came fire, still there was fire.
 Red earth, gold air, black water, white fire.

2nd verse

It's sad to carve faces in sacred stone,
 Fence off the land, slaughter buffalo.
 If not discovered until now,
 Would things be better, brothers some how?
 And then came fire, still there was fire.
 Red earth, gold air, black water, white fire.

3rd verse

Millions of people may have native blood,
 Shows that we're human, shows that we love.
 It's never too late to understand,
 Find relation in this land,
 And then came fire, still there was fire.
 Red earth, gold air, black water, white fire.
